

— Weiten, in McIntyre, p. 202

Undeniably, creative bursts of insight do occur. However, the logical extensions of existing ideas, involving long, hard work and evidence suggests that major creative achievements are generally many small, faltering steps forward. Creative ideas do not come out of nowhere. Creative ideas come from a deep well of experience and training in a specific area...

→ Csikszentmihalyi in McIntyre, p. 203

for creativity to occur, a set of rules and practices must be transmitted from the individual. The individual must then produce a novel variation in the content of the inclusion in the domain.

domain. The variation then must be selected by the field for

THE SYSTEMS MODEL